

Edward Olkovich Law

Certified Specialist, Estates and Trust Law

You Can Stop Looking for Help with Your Estate Disputes

You may be grieving because a family member or friend has died. You need legal advice to help you resolve estate disputes. Your legal advisor needs experience in defending and contesting wills and dependents' relief.

Estate lawsuits come in many different forms. You could be an executor, beneficiary or dependant.

You'll benefit from jargon-free, practical tips from a Certified Estate Specialist and estate author.

You'll find it enjoyable working with my experienced friendly team. You will be greeted by them upon arrival in a converted house near Jane subway station in Toronto's West End.

If you are involved in an Ontario estate dispute, I recommend you read my report, End Estate Lawsuits With These Simple Secrets. My Welcome Letter can help you get started. You'll find answers to many frequently asked questions.

1. Q. Why do I need an initial meeting?

Contact my office to book an initial meeting to learn how I can help you. My initial meetings are for 45 minutes at reduced rates. You have no further obligation. Read my simple Initial Meeting Agreement.

You can ask questions and discuss your needs and receive a fee estimate.

2. Q. I'm involved in an estate dispute. Do I need to book an initial meeting?

Yes. At our meeting I can explain the steps I can take to assist you. You should bring wills or court material, if any, to our meeting.

Please know I am ready to help you.

Ed Olkovich

Version: October 22, 2019

*Y:_Office Binder\Welcome Memos\2019 October Welcome Memos\2019-10-22
You Can Stop Looking for Help with Your Estate Dispute - Lawsuit Memo DJ.docx*